The 179 notes are the result of a 20 year search for Adam Hubley. A collector friend, W. Philip Keller, has 9 notes and his list is attached. A few additional collectors, here in the East, probably have another half dozen notes or so.

The 10 shilling note of 7/20/75, (Plate A). I have only one example, this being the reverse with the unbroken corner nature print, and must be rarer than originally thought.

Notes with the same serial numbers and from the same sheet:
4/3/72---2s Plate B, # 17576 and 2s6d Plate B, # 17576.
4/3/72---18d Plate B, # 20140 and 2s6d Plate B, # 20140.
7/20/75--10s Plate B, # 138 and 40s Plate B, # 138.
7/20/75--10s Plate B, # 5346 and 20s Plate B, # 5346.
The two No's 138 actually fit together.
The 4/3/72 40s note is exceedingly rare as only 5,000 were printed.

Dear Mr. Hughes:

Dick Hoober sent me your listing of Kentucky notes and I am returning the same to you with some poor photostats of about 20 notes which you do not seem to have listed. These include the Marckhoff collection which I acquired. I think you should show which notes are counterfeit.

When it comes time to have pictures made and you need anything in my collection, please let me know.

I fully appreciate all of the fine work which you have put into this listing and hope you will have the opportunity of checking the Chase collection, etc.

Sincerely yours,

ERIC P. NEWMAN NUMISMATIC

Dear Mr. Newman:

I have been asked to help do a revision of the Wismer Obsolete State Bank Note listing of the Kentucky State Bank notes for the S.P.M.C., and thought perhaps you could help me with some information or notes. Fred Markhoff and I were corresponding concerning the Kentucky notes in his collection at the time of his death. I understand that you have purchased his collection. Would you consider selling the KENTUCKY portion of the collection? Or do you intend to keep it in your personal collection?

My specialty is notes of this State and they would be a great help to me in my research and an addition to my specialty.

Will you please write me concerning this?

Cordially yours,

Earl Hughes

Dear Mr. Hughes:

With respect to your work on the Kentucky listing for SPMC, I suggest that you submit to us your list after it is substantially completed. This has been done with respect to certain other states.

With respect to Kentucky notes in the Marckhoff collection, these, as well as others, are being absorbed into my personal collection to the extent necessary and, in all probability, I will sell what I don't need for exactly what I paid for them. They will, however, be sold in bulk and no individual states will be sold separately. There were very few Kentucky pieces which I did not already have.

Good luck in your listing, and it will be a pleasure to help you.

Sincerely yours,

PRESS RELEASE

PEDIGREED LAVERE REDFIELD SILVER DOLLARS OFFERED

BY

Man has always had a strong desire to learn and document where things came from, whether it be himself (family trees, Heraldry, etc.), his pet (pedigreed dogs), or his sports (thoroughbred racing horses). Perhaps it is this quest for historical origins that has made the hobby of coin collecting so popular, for no international commodity has been around so continuously for so long as coins.

One of the intriguing questions associated with coins is who might have actually handled them - Alexander the Great, or William Shakespeare, or George Washington? But while we probably can never know who once spent a particular coin, we can, in some instances, learn which famous collector owned it. Virtually every serious numismatist owns at least one rare coin from a famous collection; and to prove it he might have the original auction envelope (probably well folded and faded) in which it was once sold.

The fabled collectors - Farouk, Kern, Menjou, Gillhousen, Green, Ruby et al will be forever remembered through their pedigreed coins. And, in turn, these coins will forever carry a certain glamour above and beyond their quality and rarity - their pedigree. One only has to search through any major rare coin auction catalog to read a "Who's Who" of past collectors, and these numismatic family trees lend added importance to their ex-coins.

The January 26th record-breaking public auction of the LaVere Redfield Collection of over 400,000 Silver Dollars has caught the public's fancy. The 7.3 million dollars paid by A-Mark Coin Company for this collection far exceeded the previous high of 5.5 million dollars estimated worth of the Lilly Collection, which was donated to the Smithsonian Institution in 1967. The next Guinness Book of Records will obviously have to be revised! Television, radio and newspaper coverage of the dramatic sale of the LaVere Redfield Silver Dollar Collection has been unparalleled, making it the most famous numismatic collection in history!

Robert L. Hughes, Inc., having been designated as one of the three primary distributors of the LaVere Redfield Silver Dollars to the public, has packaged a limited number of the Choice, Gem and Prooflike Brilliant Uncirculated dollars in special custom holders. Each holder will certify for all time that the scarce Silver Dollar contained therein is from the historic record-breaking 7.3 million dollar LaVere Redfield Collection; a fact that is expected to add to the inherent value of each coin. In addition to the Redfield pedigree, each custom holder will depict the front page banner headline newspaper story of the record sale - possibly the biggest numismatic story of this Bicentennial year!

The fabulous LaVere Redfield Collection of Silver Dollars has been one of the best kept secrets in the numismatic world for almost 40 years. It was so secret that not even the second highest bidder knew its contents! Thus, the list of Redfield Silver Dollars now available from Robert L. Hughes, Inc. will be an important reference to all serious collectors of Silver Dollars, as well as investors and beginners. The free list of certified LaVere Redfield Silver Dollars, priced from $25 and up, can be obtained from Robert L. Hughes, Inc., 6920 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, California 90028.

Dear Mr. Hughes:

I think you and I are going to have some fun working together. I appreciate your finding the Gentleman's Magazine issues for me.

You indicated you would like some colonial currency in exchange and I enclose:

1776 N.J. 18d XF # 2710
1776 N.J. 3s XF # 14666
1776 N.J. 6s XF # 1267
1770 MD $4 VG+ # 2185

I enclose the latest price guide which gives $50 as the wholesale bid price for XF notes of New Jersey and $27 wholesale bid for Maryland VG notes. This totals $177 wholesale so I hope what I have done is fair. If not please complain.

Incidentally Vol. I of 1786 of Gentleman's Magazine is missing the first few pages. If you have another you could exchange it with me.

Now for the future I am very interested in anything I do not have on coins or paper money in early newspapers , books or magazines, money cartoons, etc. I am a pure collector. I have a large American numismatic library. I try to run a free numismatic museum and as you seem to know O write on numismatics continually. I do not do anything commercial. I am sure you can find things for me and I am sorry I didn't know about you earlier. Please start looking. I have loads of duplicates of books, paper money , coins, etc. if you like anything like that.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Thanks,

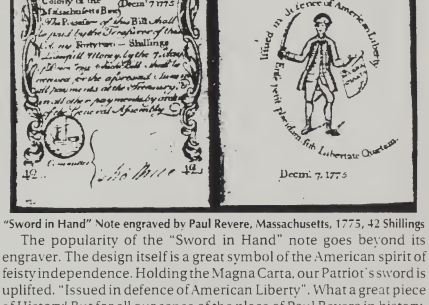
Paul Revere, Patriot, Silversmith, Engraver, & Printer

History is about events, to be sure. For numismatists, though, the study of history starts with the artifacts — the coins and currency that have survived through the years for us to own and admire. But what makes history come alive, beyond holding the artifacts in your hand, is knowing the people and places associated with the object. While our appreciation naturally focuses on the currency item, there is underlying excitement that comes from tying the piece of paper to famous people from the past.

Colonial Currency provides some interesting ways to do this. Even Americans who know little history will recognize certain names. Paul Revere, for one. Generations of school children learned Longfellow's poem: "Listen my children and you shall hear, of the midnight ride of Paul Revere. On the 18th of April, in Seventy-five; Hardly a man is now alive, who remembers that famous day and year." Hopefully, today's students have learned of him as well. Owning a piece of Revere silverware may be out of the reach of most collectors, but a "Sword in Hand" note that Revere engraved and printed is the centerpiece of many a collection.



"Sword in Hand" Note engraved by Paul Revere, Massachusetts, 1775, 42 Shillings

The popularity of the "Sword in Hand" note goes beyond its engraver. The design itself is a great symbol of the American spirit of feisty independence. Holding the Magna Carta, our Patriot's sword is uplifted, "Issued in defence of American Liberty". What a great piece of History! But for all our sense of the place of Paul Revere in history, wouldn't it also be nice to know more about Joseph Wheeler, Thomas Rice, and other signers of Massachusetts' Colonial issues?

PRICE GUIDE

All of the following prices are for the least expensive note from each of the colonies. These 'type' prices are not indicative of prices for other types or varieties from the same colony, which may be substantially more. Exceptionally bright, well-centered examples are worth a premium over the uncirculated values. Values refer to dealer-to-dealer trading, with retail prices somewhat higher, depending on the scarcity of the notes from that issuer and the tenacity of the buyer or seller.

Dear Mrs. Hull:

With respect to your inquiry concerning the Twenty Five Cents Miners Bank of Savings of Alta, California, I do not know whether the photostat you sent me is the same size as the note which you own. The genuine note is about 60% of the lineal size of what you sent. If your piece is the size of the photocopy you sent me it is merely a picture. If your piece is of the smaller size, then it could be genuine and it would a rare note. I am sorry I cannot be more specific without seeing the original.

Please let me hear from you if we can be of further help.

Dear Noel:

As to your exciting report of the discovery of the Somers Island coins in 1993 and 1994 I am enclosing some material on the series which you may already have. It would be possible for you to find a new variety of the 6d die which could happen due to the number found.

We have in our collection 12d, 6d, 3d,and 2d.

The failure of their circulating value is very logical. I would guess that for local purposes they were acceptable as token coinage until Spanish American silver from Mexico, etc. with intrinsic value was available. Then the thin copper pieces without intrinsic value and intended to pass as shillings etc. had no status because they would not be accepted outside of Bermuda.

Captain John Smith wrote "our men found divers crosses, pieces of Spanish monies here and there." and "a merry fellow having found some few Dollars against the Flemish wrecke." Then he records that in 1616: " they had for a time a certaine kinde of brasse money with a hogge on one side" (Brasse meant copper there as you know) so when the above was written in 1624 the coinage was already an event of the past (Crosby, p. 17).

I hope this helps your article.

By all means ask the Bermuda group to send the exact weight of each piece. Fine pictures should be taken of them.

My best,

Eric P. Newman

Dear Noel:

Your article is great for puhlic appreciation and the readers will he intrigued. It makes a strong inpact for archaeology. The ego struggles in academia are not new to me. Based upon coins I wrote and entirely new interpretation of a portion of the graveyard scene from Hamlet in 1976 and it was puhlished hy the American Numismatic Society. I ohtained about 10 years later full proof of the interpretation and expanded the piece to suhmit to Folgers Quarterly. They turned it down, Why ? Because I was not in literary academia is my view. Their view was that the key word involved had heen put in a new dictionary. I explained that my data had heen plagarized from my draft when I was having it checked in England. The writer of the dictionary was asked specifically if my draft had heen seen first and refused to respond. So what else is new. The item was puhlished in the Shakespeare Record instead.
As to the shilling on the hox I rememher reading ahout the find of a marker with text which Sir Francis Drake left as a claim when he visited the San Francisco Bay area and it had an Elizahethan shilling hammered into it. I do not recall where it was written up or when nor do I rememher whether its authenticity was challenged. It is somewhere out there. Using coins for decorative purposes on a money hox sounds normal. Coins are also inset into English household silver. Coins as decorations on things is very common in West Africa. I want to see it and you certainly must have had great delight on your "Boxing day".

I look forward to seeing you.

I received a communication from the American Numismatic Society in reply to your inquiry.

The organization advises me that under P.K.Anderson's Will, his entire numismatic collection was left to the American Numismatic Society and therefore they added the Oklahoma token collection to their cabinet. It is available to the public there.

With respect to books, Henry Grunthal, on behalf of the American Numismatic Society, selected what he thought were only numismatic publications but when the books arrived there were about 15 containing P.K.Anderson's bookplate but which are not numismatic. If Mrs. Huntsinger wishes these books returned to her, the American Numismatic Society will be happy to do so.

I am glad you inquired about this situation and hope I have been helpful.

Dear Mr. Newman:

Thank you very much for your letter of April 23, in which you gave me two leads on information on currency in Tennessee. I plan to write Paul Garland in Texas whom you recommended. He may know the private collector to whom you referred. I will be in touch with you again after I have pursued those two leads.

Very truly yours,

Dear Dr. Hunter:

Thank you for asking me to display paper money of Colonial America at INTERPAM '81.

Although I would like to cooperate with you, I feel it is impractical for me to arrange such a display. I am sure that there are many others who would be glad to exhibit some of their material.

My best wishes for a successful congress.

Dear Mr. Hunter:

I received your letter just as I was about to go on vacation. I did not have time to study the matter thoroughly but, offhand, it appears that both pieces are counterfeit.

I call your particular attention to the fact that the S in THOMAS is different on the photographs you sent. Apparently the piece of type fell out and was replaced with the wrong size. I also call your attention to the fact that Mr. Fitzgerald's specimen was not acquired last year, as my records show that it was written up in COIN WORLD as being purchased by him prior to March 26, 1969.

The genuine pieces are type set and it is obvious that the small text on the face of both pieces you submitted is a product of engraving.

Thank you for the pictures. They will go in our file.

If you want more information, please contact me in a few weeks.

Dear Mr. Newman:

I got your address from Richard Picker whom I almost met last month but, unfortunately, his stay at his winter home down here was drastically curtailed by illness. I am sure all of his friends are deeply concerned.

We did meet over the telephone and through correspondence during which I acquired a group of 1748 and 1754 North Carolina notes.

My reason for writing is to pass on some minor information and to pose a question.

Many years ago I bought a 1754 four penny 'Mountain Lion' note from Tom Fitzgerald who had two other notes of the same series and each bore the same serial number 12197. The other two notes were the eight penny 'Boar' and the one shilling 'Bear.'

From your listing I assume that there were three different plates of the three lower denominations and that there is undoubtedly another eight penny note out there waiting to be discovered. It would be fun to match up the 2 remaining series.

While I think most of the lettering and indentation scroll work on each plate could have been by a single engraver, the vignettes show a considerable variety of style and competence.

An engraver can be a superb letter and scroll man, but quite unable to draw an animate object, so there is always the possibility that the plate minus some of the vignettes was turned over to another engraver. I foolishly returned to Richard an eight penny 'Butterfly' because it was such a miserable piece of engraving. I should have kept it to compare with a four penny and shilling note of equally bad engraving.

This whole plate could be a forgery, though there is plenty of evidence that mediocre engravers were often used of necessity.

If this letter is too long, it is because I want to pass on this minor comment to headquarters.

Sincerely,

Robert Hunter

Dear Mr. Hunter:

Thank you for your February 15, 1983 comment on the North Carolina 1748 and 1754 issues.

As you may already know, Richard Picker died shortly after returning from Florida. He was a very close and admired friend of mine.

Three 1754 notes with the same serial number sound like a remainder sheet, but if they were circulated extensively, it becomes suspicious of forgery. What condition is yours? What condition were the others you saw?

How many subjects, and which subjects (notes), were engraved on each plate is a real problem on the 1754 issue. There are 17 different note types known. Printing six subjects from one plate or eight subjects from one plate is normal, but sometimes different sizes of notes produce problems and different numbers of subjects to be printed from one plate cause others problems such as requiring two or three subjects on a plate instead of six or eight or cutting a plate in half after using it for a while. It is a good guess that another 8d may have been issued. Whether three 8d were on the same plate as the three 4d is a guess. I never try to guess these matters, but I am ready to change anything when people like you send me clues.

As to different styles of animal engraving, I wish to point out that engravers often had apprentices to help them. Thus, part of a plate could have been done by a different hand in a normal way without any modern forgery or early counterfeit complexities.

I hope I have been helpful.

Sincerely,

Eric P. Newman

Dear Mr. Newman:

Thank you for your interesting and informative letter of February 22 concerning some North Carolina notes.

I too was shocked and distressed at Richard Picker's death, though it was not unexpected judging from his last telephone call to me before returning to New York. We will miss him and his outgoing help to all of us in our field.

I enclose a Xerox copy of the 1754 N. C. four penny (Mountain Lion) note which Tom Fitzgerald sold me in 1971. At the same time he gave me the enclosed copies of the other 2 notes which he had with the same serial number (12197). Mine is in excellent condition and so were his. Unless my memory is playing me ~~fake~~ false, he had found several colonial notes in an album up in New England the previous summer. One of the 2 notes I bought from him has thin spots where it was removed from a mount, or page. When will people learn to turn the note over and remove the gunk from the note and not vice versa? I also seem to remember that he wrote to you at that time.

Thank you for reminding me that the plates were usually much larger in those days.

I should not have made such a stupid suggestion (that there were 3 separate plates).

If you are interested in keeping the copies of Tom's 2 notes you may do so. I Xeroxed the copies along with my original note.

Sincerely,

Robert Hunter

Dear Mr.Hurt:

You were nice enough to show me your Confederate counterfeit pieces,in Atlanta, and I wish I had more time to examine them. Arlie Slabaugh and I are working on a study of the Upham prints in the way of notes and I would like to know, specifically, from you what notes you have which are either Confederate, state issues, city issues, or otherwise, which have a marginal indication that they are printed by Upham, or if they are facsimile notes. For the present I am a little too busy in research to ask you to send me your notes and therefore it might be wise to make a list of your counterfeits designating whether the numbering is printed or written, whether the signatures are printed or written, designating the plate letters, and any other technical differences you notice. Apparently many of the Upham notes were reprinted with various additions and changes such as the addition of the word "New Orleans", etc.

The note cut out of the newspaper is from Leslie's Magazine and I have the date in my notes if you want it.

I look forward to hearing from you on this interesting subject.

Dear Mrs. Hutchins:

The $3 Continental Currency issue dated May 10, 1775 is catalogued at $7.50 in very good condition, $17.50 in fine condition, and $25.00 in very fine condition. It is the first issue of the Continental Congress.

Why don't you leave it on consignment with some coin dealer, in Birmingham, at a specific price, and pay the dealer a commission if he sells it.

I cannot help you further on the price because I would have to know the condition of the piece.

I hope I have been helpful.

St. Louis, MO 63105-2225

Mr. Newman:

I am writing to thank you for taking my telephone call back in November and again to apologize for calling you at home. It was truly an honor to have spoken with you. During our conversation, you had said that you would be willing to answer a couple of written questions that I might have concerning counterfeiting during the American Revolution. I hope that you might have the time to answer the following questions:

1) I was wondering if you had received any kind of response to your 1958 article in the British Numismatic Journal? I looked at later journals to see if anyone had written an article in response, but did not see anything. I was hoping that your article might have prompted someone to reply or at least elicited some sort of comment from someone who was familiar with the subject.

2) I was wondering if you are familiar with any works on this subject from a British point of view? I have not been able to find much information about counterfeiting during this time period in financial histories of England or in the financial relationships between England and her colonies. I would have thought that this would have been an interesting topic to research, from their point of view as the first country to use counterfeiting as a weapon of war.

3) I have read the articles that you have written on the subject, as well articles by Lynn Glaser (Counterfeiting in America, Continental Currency), Leo Gorelkin (Currency and Its Counterfeiting in Colonial America), Kenneth Scott (New Hampshire Tory Counterfeiters ..., A British Counterfeiting Press in New York Harbor, and the Counterfeiting in Colonial ... series), as well as general articles on Continental Currency and they all seem to repeat the same stories or anecdotes that you wrote about in the 1950s. I was wondering if you think that the research that you did covers all there is to this subject? Articles that were written in the 1970s and the 1980s pretty much just relate everything that you talked about earlier. I would think that if there had been any new information or new manuscript sources had been found, that these later articles would have the new information.

4) During our conversation, I had briefly asked you about the contribution of John Richardson to your work on counterfeiting--since you had acknowledged work done by him in your Counterfeit Continental Currency Goes to War article. From our discussion, I got the impression that Mr. Richardson did not publish anything concerning this subject. Would this be a correct assumption? I have tried to search the library catalog for publications by Mr. Richardson, but if he has written articles in journals instead of books, then it would be more difficult to find anything written by him.

I appreciate you taking the time to read this letter and to thank you for the opportunity to ask you these questions. Hopefully, you will have some spare time, in between all of the interesting projects that you are working on, to answer these questions. Thank you for everything and I will be looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Keith A. Hydak

Dear Eric,

Thank you for sending me the photographs of the New York Assay office.

After much consideration and chatting with Bill Louth we decided to use the original building that has now been moved to the Metropalitan Museum of Art. When they tore this building down they marked all the pieces and then reconstructed it exactly as it was on the museum grounds.

I enjoyed your talk so much at our symposium. It was the highlight of the day.

Dear Sir,

I am seeking an educational grant for a friend, Sister Katharine Hargrove of Manhattanville College. I had the good fortune to attend Sister Hargrove's classes at Maryville last year and found them extremely interesting and personally enriching. At that time she was pioneering the use of film in the teaching of theology. She has also used contemporary films very successfully in Judeo-Christian dialogue.

Sister Hargrove is a member of the Steering Committee of the United American Hebrew Congregation, the Executive Board of the Bishops' Committee for Catholic-Jewish Relations and the Commission on Judaism and Christianity in Rome. She is the author of "The Star and the Cross" and received the Edith Stein Award for 1966. Presently she is working with Dr. Joseph Lichter on a text-book on Judaism.

This past year my husband and I formed a Film Study Club for the parents of teen-agers. Our group is inter-faith by design but not intended to be a "great dialogue". It has been a truly happy experience for all of us. As one of the Academy Award recipients said "The international language is no longer Esperanto but Film!"

I am writing to ask if your foundation could help Sister Hargrove in her work this summer? If you want any further information you could contact me -
